

square dance, con't.

long sleeves, no matter what the temperature is.

Dress is another requirement and most women have 20-30 dresses.

"My wife counted her dresses last night and she has 23," Charlie notes.

Under the dresses, the women wear petticoats which are made from about 50 yards of material, puffing the dress out for different twirls, turns and spins.

Traveling is half the fun of dancing and Charlie and Helen don't confine themselves to only the Detroit area to do their dancing. They have visited England, Germany, Holland, Belgium, Austria, Italy and are planning to go to Hawaii, Australia and New Zealand, not to mention the countless weekend jaunts across the states and Canada they make to kick their heels up.

Why such a growing popularity worldwide in square dancing?

"It's a fun evening that won't cost you more than about $5 per couple and you meet so many people," Charlie says. "It's better than going to a show or sitting home watching TV. Plus, again, it's good exercise."

Every time they travel to a dance, square dancers are awarded a badge. When Charlie and Helen went to Europe, they received medals with two dogs on them, indicating that they had traveled over 2,000 miles to dance.

"There are all sorts of badges. If, for instance, you dance in a square that has four bald fellows, like me, you get a badge for that," Charlie grins. "It's called the Knot Head badge."
